How can parents help?

Parents, you can help with your child's Computing knowledge by having open and honest conversations around online  safety and internet use. The children are taught the SMART rules for online safety which are applicable both at home and in school. You can discuss these rules with them and refer to them when they are accessing any relevant technologies at home. You can also ensure that you have the relevant parental controls on your devices and TV's. We often hold Online Safety Parent Workshops so your attendance at these would greatly benefit your children's learning. In addition to the above, you can encourage a healthy relationship with computers by taking an interest in what your child is doing online and asking them to explain what it is about the internet that they enjoy.
